

Professor Toni C. Antonucci
United States

Toni C. Antonucci is the Douvan Collegiate Professor of Psychology and Program Director of the Life Course Development Program at the Institute for Social Research, University of Michigan. Her research focuses on social relations and health across the lifespan among individuals and families and across generations. Her work has involved populations in United States, Europe, Asia and the Middle East. She is particularly interested in how social relations optimize or jeopardize an individual's ability to face life's challenges. She was President of the Gerontological Society of America (GSA) and the Society for the Study of Human Development, editor of the Journal of Gerontology: Psychological Sciences and the recipient of GSA's Distinguished Career Contribution to Gerontology Award. She is a member of the MacArthur Network on the Aging Society, Secretary General-Elect of the International Association of Gerontology and Geriatrics, and was recently elected fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. She is President -Elect of the International Society for the Study of Behavioral Development. She was the Principal Investigator on the MAC House study, a field experiment designed to bring successful aging interventions to an affordable housing community, is currently the PI on a twenty-five year multi-wave study of Social Relations and Health across the Life Span, and a study of Social Relations, Forgiveness and Humility in three U.S. Ethnic groups. She is currently a Russell Sage Fellow at the Russell Sage Foundation in New York focusing on socioeconomic status, social relations and health.
